Voices of Displacement

Abdullah

"A group of us, all displaced, wanted to keep playing soccer, so we got together once a week and played in a six-player soccer field. But we soon did not have enough money for transportation or field fees. So instead we continued playing soccer in our neighborhood's streets. We used to go to the local vegetable market at seven in the morning to collect plastic boxes, which we used as barricades for jumping exercises.

People laughed at us when they saw us practicing in the street. Now I am participating in professional soccer training, in a proper field, for free. This training is taking my skills to the next level. I learn much more than just soccer skills here. I learn discipline, self-respect, respect for time, respect for my team members, and sportsmanship. I hope that one day I can play for Manchester United. The English Premier League is my favorite, it is fast-paced, and there is a lot of skillful moves" said Abdullah, 15, who displaced from Qaraqosh, Ninewa.

Abdullah and 49 others between the ages 9 and 20 are taking part in an IOM soccer school training for displaced Iraqi children and young men in Ainkawa, Erbil. The activity is supported by the Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance (OFDA).
